Forum types: Display Options in Moodle v2.0

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Forum Type</th>
<th>Display</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A single simple discussion</td>
<td>The conversation appears. Student will click “Reply” to respond.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Each person posts one discussion</td>
<td>This forum allows each person to start one discussion topic. The conversation appears. Each student will click on “Add a new discussion topic” to create their discussion. Classmates will click on the “Reply” link to respond their classmates’ discussions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Q and A forum</td>
<td>Each student will click on “Add a new question” to post their question. Participants will click on the “Discussion” topic to the left. Once in the discussion area, participants will click “Reply” to post their answer(s).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Standard forum displayed in a blog-like format</td>
<td>Each student will click on “Add a new topic” to post their reaction. The display is in the format of a blog, one post after another. Students should click on “Discuss this topic” to enter the post.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Standard forum for general use</td>
<td>Students can start a new discussion (click “Add a new discussion”) and or reply to your discussion.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
A Single Simple Discussion (student view)

Display replies flat, with newest first.

A single simple discussion
by Michelle Barthelemy : Saturday, March 31, 2012, 12:15 PM

What do you think about using Clickers in the classroom? Post your initial reaction by Sunday evening 11:00 pm. Have an online conversation about your reactions with at least two of your classmates. You must put closure to the conversation by Thursday 8:00 pm.

Click link to participate in the discussion

Each Person Posts One Discussion (student view)

Read: Speak Up? Raise Your Hand? That May No Longer Be Necessary

Each of you should post a question about this article and the use of technology in the classroom by Sunday at 11:00 pm. Then reply to each of your classmates’ initial post and continue a discussion with two of your classmates by Thursday at 8:00 pm.

This forum allows each person to start one discussion to Click to add a question.

Q and A Forum (student view)

This is a question and answer forum. In order to see other responses to these questions, you must first post your answer

Read: Speak Up? Raise Your Hand? That May No Longer Be Necessary

Post your questions.

Clickers

Michelle Barthelemy

0

Click link to enter the discussion. Then click “Reply” to participate in the discussion

Click to post a question.
Standard forum displayed in a blog-like format (student view)

Click link to enter the discussion. Then click “Reply” to participate in the discussion.

Click to start a new topic.

Standard forum for general use (student view)

Click link to enter the discussion. Then click “Reply” to participate in the discussion.