Auditing a Class- new guidelines!

Students occasionally want to take a class for their own interest or for review and may not be interested in a grade. At GCC, students may audit a course, i.e., participate in the class without earning a grade, credit hours, or academic credit with some restrictions.

Starting this fall, students auditing a class must:

- satisfy any course prerequisites
- meet any program requirements

Other considerations:

- Students must state their intention to audit a course at the time of registration.
- Financial aid will not pay for an audited course.
- Changing to or from an audited status must be completed before the end of the Add period.
